

Bus service is great community perk

Donna Samuels Junction City

1:25 p.m. EST, December 8, 2010

I think there is an important perk within our community about which many people are totally unaware: the little known Bluegrass Ultra Transit Bus Service.

I found this gem when I was exploring options to get to the Bluegrass Airport in Lexington over Thanksgiving. Flying in and out of Bluegrass Airport was made effortless and enjoyable since discovering the Bluegrass Ultra Transit Bus. No need to find a ride from family or friends, or pay to park at the airport.

I just contacted the Bluegrass Ultra Transit to check the schedule and then caught the bus at Walnut Street in Danville. I was dropped off at the airport terminal doors for a very reasonable fare. I let them know when I was returning and after a very short wait, they were there to bring me home.

They have limited hours, but I was able to make my travel plans to coincide with their service. It is my understanding the bus has several drop-off and pick-up points in Lexington and runs several times a day. I am surprised, when I mention this to people, that most are unaware of this great service.

I hope that in sharing this more people will become aware and begin using this transportation so we don't lose this wonderful service.

Donna Samuels
Junction City

Copyright © 2011, AM News